

TASTE OF HOPE

Ronald McDonald
House Charities®
Greater Cincinnati

You can help give families a Taste of Hope by preparing and serving a meal at Cincinnati's Ronald McDonald House. Come together with your coworkers, family, friends, church or civic group while you help provide the nutrition kids need to heal and allow parents more time to focus on their critically ill children.

We'll take care of the details, including the food, recipes, cookware and instruction from a professional chef. Your group will make lasting memories, and you'll leave knowing that you made a difference for families from the tri-state and around the world while their children are hospitalized.

"I cried when I sat down to eat. It felt like Sunday dinner with my mom. It was so comforting and special that someone cared enough to make dinner for me. I can never say thank you enough."

What families and volunteers say about Taste of Hope

At our House, families find comfort in being with others who understand what they are going through. You can be a part of this network of love and support. Over meals, they share stories, compare notes and gain strength in knowing that they are not going through this alone.

"There were times when our family stayed in our own little bubble. Now, during meal times, we've formed friendships with other families. Emily used to go days without eating, but now she looks forward to it. My kids are eating healthy, well-balanced meals, and Emily's doctors are impressed with her new appetite."

Sarah Fisher
Emily's mom

Volunteers share that participating in Taste of Hope is a great team-building experience. We have many organizations that make Taste of Hope a regular team activity. We would love for you to join us, too!

"Taste of Hope strengthened the bond we share. We all felt that we were making a difference together. We came to the House as colleagues, but we left as a 'work family' and as friends."
